

Stephen Wong is the Regional Director, Americas, of the Hong Kong Trade Development Council (HKTDC). Based in New York, he is the highest ranking representative of HKTDC overseeing all of the Council's activities in the U.S.A., Canada and Central and South America.

Mr. Wong draws upon his extensive experience in trade development and promotion in the U.S.A. and Asia to create and facilitate opportunities in international trade between Hong Kong and its trading partners.

Prior to his present assignment, Mr. Wong was HKTDC's Director of Information Services responsible for spearheading HKTDC's extensive e-commerce capabilities and business training programs for Hong Kong enterprises. He has also held the position of Director of Production Promotion Department of HKTDC, raising the profile of Hong Kong's major industries from consumer electronics, apparel and accessories, to gifts and premiums.

Established by law in Hong Kong over 40 years ago, HKTDC is the statutory organization for promoting Hong Kong's international trade through comprehensive services of business matching, product magazines, trade fairs and the provision of market intelligence.

Mr. Wong is Honorary Adviser to the National US Hong Kong Business Association with 10 Member Organizations located throughout the U.S.A., serving over 2,200 members in Atlanta, California, Hawaii, Illinois, Massachusetts, New York, Philadelphia, Texas and Washington.

Mr. Wong graduated from the University of Saskatchewan and completed the Senior Executive Education Program at New York's Columbia University.
